To Whom It May Concern:

I worked with GriffinWink on a new website design in late 2018 and early 2019. As the Director of Sales & Marketing of Poka Lambro, a telecommunications company, it was very important to me that our website be as modern as the technology and services we were providing to our customers. Out-of-date information, graphics, and overall design led to our decision to build a new website. Poka Lambro met with several companies and received several more proposals for the job. I knew GriffinWink was the right company to work with after our first meeting. They took notes vigorously and asked very specific questions to get a feel for what we were looking for. While other designers pitched ideas and showed off past work, the GriffinWink team seemed more interested in learning what we wanted to do. Their build timeline was the fastest proposed and their pricing was more than fair.

The entire team at GriffinWink was very easy to work with and implemented our ideas flawlessly. They had many creative ideas and design suggestions along the way. They were quick to respond to questions and comments, and provided important insights and feedback that never would have crossed my mind. They met all of their promised deadlines, and the entire project went according to plan. The final product was even better than we anticipated. When all was said and done, I knew that Poka Lambro had a website that was as good as, or better than, many of the larger companies in our industry. It was easy for our customers to use and it looked great. I would use them again in a heartbeat, and would recommend them to anyone looking to build a new website.

Sincerely,

Tray Young
